Welcome to the 68kMLA Wiki — Your resource for information about vintage Macintosh computers.

This wiki is under active maintenance. We're working to import data from the old MediaWiki instance. See this work thread for more info.

You must login with a 68kMLA Forums account to edit the wiki.

What is this?

The idea of this wiki is to act as an “information repository” — to gather as much information as possible about vintage Apple products. As useful websites slowly disappear off the face of the Internet, we're hoping that this can become a “one stop shop” for useful information.

How can I help?

Simple! Share your expertise by adding, expanding, and editing pages. The more information we can gather and the more accurate and organized you can make it, the better.

Head over to the Community Portal to see what the current status of the project is and what needs to be done. Be aware of our guidelines and know know where to start looking for help. If you need direction on where to dive in at, try linking our dead ends and orphans, fix redirects, categorize, or add a page!

Take a look at what's changed!
